Personal Nukes

It's rolling around.

Jeff Yunes

Constructed out of tin and uranium-235, "Personal Nukes" challenges participants to consider: could an armed society be **too** polite?

My work explores the relationship between new class identities and daytime TV. With influences as diverse as Caravaggio and Francis Bacon, new variations are generated from both explicit and implicit dialogues.

Ever since I was a child I have been fascinated by the endless oscillation of the human condition. What starts out as contemplation soon becomes corrupted into a carnival of distress, leaving only a sense of what could have been and the inevitability of a new order.

As wavering phenomena become distorted through emergent and academic practice, the viewer is left with an epitaph for the inaccuracies of our condition.

Naked Dinosaur Rides      7:30 & F in Black Rock City

DragonCamp

This example was taken without permission from DragonCamp at Burning Man:

Yes indeed, we have captured one of the unbelievable full-size VelociRaptor Dinosaurs from Jurassic Park and brought it to the Playa for your amazement. It is semi-tame, but becomes agitated by moving or bright colored clothing, so she must be ridden naked to remain calm and avoid attack. A once in a life-time experience. Limited ride times but come by to visit for a photo op if you don't believe it..! Or come to the DragonCamp Armory to make your own metal bikini to pose with.
